The company allows you to hire from their team of highly trained, accomplished, and skilled developers. You can think of X-Team acting as the middle man between your company and the freelance developers. This platform helps you save time and puts you in touch with high-quality developers for your company.

Node.js

Toptal is similar to X-Team in many ways. Both hire expert freelancers and connect them to clients. The two also personalize matching developers to clients based on culture, time zone, and other features relevant to your company.

X-Team developers can work full-time and are scalable. Scalability means that you can hire different developers with more advanced skills as a project progresses. It could also entail having one developer work on increasingly more complex tasks for your company.

Finally, the company offers case studies describing the work X-Team did for different clients. They only have three listed on their website (Kaplan, Fox Broadca) Tj T* BT /F1 helped the partner company grow.

The drawback first is that X-Team reviews from business owners are rare. They don't have a single comment on the popular review platform Trustpilot. As a result, it's difficult to see what it's like to work with one of their developers due to limited testimonials. Most X-Team reviews are from developers who tried to work there complaining about the hiring process.

We found from a review website that X-Team developer rates tend to stay around $40-$50 per hour. Using that estimate, it could cost you $86,000 a year to hire one of their developers full-time.
