Sadly, no. Amazon Associates is not a pay-per-click type of affiliate program, which is why you will only get paid whenever you generate a sale. The commission differs largely depending on the type of product your users end up buying. Does Amazon Affiliate pay for clicks? On the other hand, there are two main problems when using this method. If you make people add a product to their cart, they might get put off by it per se and not want to visit your site in the future (that has happened in the past). Moreover, you get a 90-day cookie only on the product that has been added in the cart, not on everything that that shopper orders over the 3-month period. So that means that you can make less than half of what you used to if you rely on this affiliate program alone. What's worse is that Amazon has a strict policy as to who can use their API. So, you now have two options. You either stick to the Amazon affiliate program but make considerably less money (and there are people who used to make in the th) Tj T* B using any plugins that work with Amazon's API, start copying the images manually, but use only the 'buy buttons' to direct people to Amazon and to another affiliate site.

How does Amazon Affiliate pay?

But there is another thing that has changed, too, and it's that Amazon now lets people use their international cards and bank accounts, too, especially since they now have Amazon affiliate programs for most countries across the world. Net-A-Porter for example, have announced a 30% Black Friday discount that you can take advantage of right this minute, with handbags by Paco Rabanne, Anya Hindmarch, Marni and Ganni all among the discounted products.

The Farfetch Black Friday sale has already moved into its second phase, with initial discounts of up to 50% now benefitting from a further 20% off and free shipping.

NOW - £417 Aspinal of London Madison Tote.

Kate Middleton owns Aspinal's smart, top-handle bag in both black and pink, and has worn them to the Royal Opera House in 2018, the 2018 Global Ministerial Mental Health Summit and to Bradford in 2020.

A couple of prestige brands like LOEWE and Bottega tend to be excluded from the sale, but bags by the likes of Jimmy Choo, Ganni, Balmain and See by Chloé are included in the discounts, so there's plenty to choose from.

Last year offered a site-wide 20% off sale and their handbags were up for grabs at great discounts.

On Cyber Monday, they added a 50% discount to selected sale items, for one day only.

Hopefully this year, they will be just as generous. John Lewis
