Why risk taking a card and going bust, when it's a fair assumption that's what the dealer will do?

Of course, sometimes the dealer will not go over 21, and you will lose the hand, but the correct play in the long term is to stand on any hand over 11 if the de aler shows a weak opening card.

Although that $\% 439;$ possible, and you would have twice the amount of money on the table, you should never split tens.

Even if the dealer has a weak card like a five, don't split tens.
