Live betting, also known as "in-play betting," refers to gambling that occurs after a game has started.

Sports gambling stretches back as far as recorded history, with reports of wagers being made during the ancient Greek Olympic Games.

With the ability to place bets during a game, people can bet on things such as the halftime score or the number of fouls during a game.

In live betting, the wagering will be ongoing throughout the event.

Gambling always involves a negative expected return-the house always has the advantage.

What is a unit in sports betting?

It's mainly used because everyone's bankroll is different and a unit refers to the percentage of a bankroll.

One unit is usually equal to one percent of a bankroll, though it's not the same for everyone.

For example, if your bankroll is $1,000, one unit would be $10 or 1%.

Often, a one-unit play compared to a five-unit play is in reference to a bettor
