As internet gaming showed signs of popularity in the early 2000s, the Portuguese government stepped in and added additional clarification on their gambling laws

Legislative Decree 282/2003 sought to grant SCML a license to essentially operate online and prohibit all other operators from providing their services online or via any electronic device.

After Bwin lost their ECJ case against the Portuguese monopoly, they continued to offer their online service.

Portugal Moves to a Regulated Market

As the economic hardships continued throughout Europe, resulting in Portugal receiving financial bailouts, it was hard to ignore the revenue brought in by online gaming in Spain, Italy, and France.

In April 2015, the Legal Regime of Online Gambling and Betting (Regime Juridico) Tj T* BT /F

66/2015 was signed into law.

This gaming law established a scheme for operators to apply for licenses for fixed odds sports betting, casino games, and poker.
