Paddy Power is a very well-known bookmaker in the UK and Ireland thanks to its eye-catching creative marketing and promotional offers that are second to none. One minor drawback is the accessibility with the colouring of the page at times making it hard to read when looking for these football markets.

Types of fake news

Sensationalism sells, and outrageous or weird stories and distorted images drive clicks and shares online. Clickbait refers to stories deliberately designed to get more website visitors and increase advertising revenue for the website owners often at the expense of truth and accuracy.

This is when genuine news sources are impersonated with false, made-up stories to deceive or mislead audiences.

US presidential election in 2016

Fake and misleading stories relating to medical treatments or major diseases such as cancer or Covid-19 could lead to individuals making misinformed decisions about their health.

3. Check other sources:

A lot of fake news is cleverly written to provoke strong emotional reactions such as fear or anger. Maintain a critical mindset by asking yourself why has this story been written? Is it promoting a particular cause or agenda? Is it trying to make me click through to another website?

10. Use a fact-checking site:
